

10 years survival with Prostate cancer with natural remedies

11-02-2011

A Danish Male born 1947 and living abroad was diagnosed in May 2001 through biopsy with prostate cancer. Already one year before the PSA was found to be 5,7.

The patient did not want any operation or radiation so he came to Humlegaarden at the end of September 2001 with a PSA of 6.25. Just before the arrival he had started treatment with the natural remedy PC-SPES, and we supplemented this treatment with the mistletoe compound Helixor A in increasing dosage with the 5-alfa reductase inhibitor Proscar and with different homeopathic and herbal remedies like Prostagutt Forte – (a combination of saw palmetto and stinging nettle).

He continued with Helixor A until September 2002, but then switched over to the malaria remedy artemisinin 200 mg daily which he took daily together with Prostagutt Forte until August 2009.

In August 2009 he increased the dose of Artemisinin to 300 mg daily except Sunday.

At our latest contact with the patient on the 10th February 2011 he is very fine. Working as usual and taking a long walk every day. He is only using Artemisinin and Prostagutt Forte.

CONCLUSION:

The malaria remedy Artemisinin is an extract of the Chinese herb Artemisia annua and has been shown to have some very interesting effects on cancer. It is said to be one of the easiest way in which to give cancer cells oxidative knockout stress.

The above patient has constantly been advised by his conventional urologists to undergo an operation, but he has continued to follow his own intuition and until now has been living a completely normal life
